On board snakes and stairs you can find three different symbols, circle, diamond and star. This means that each of the icons will correspond to one of the three categories of the world of knowledge cards. For example if a player lands on a box with a circle, the player has to answer from the easy class and when landing on the diamond the player has to answer from the solid class. And of course you can create your own question cards. Rules of the game snakes and stairs. To determine who starts the game, players alternate in rolling dice. The player with the highest score starts, and wraps the dice again to move. All players start with a playpiece outside the board, with square number one as the first box to rely on their role. More than one playing piece can occupy the same box. There's no extra turn to roll six. On their turn, they roll the dice and move the playpiece piece along the squares according to the number rolled. When a player lands on a box that has the foot of a ladder, they move up to the top of the ladder. When a player lands on a yard containing a snake's head, they move down the snake, down to the end of the snake's tail. When a player lands on the scene with a symbol, such as a circle, star or diamond, the player must give an answer to the card question at the top of the pile with the same symbol. If the answer is correct, the player can stay on the scene. If it is also the player's fault that returns to the box he came from. When the player lands on the square containing the foot of the ladder, they move up to the top of the ladder. If this box contains a code, the player has to answer the card question. Again if the answer is correct, the player stays in the arena. If the answer is wrong, the player must return from where he came from Not to a box that has the foot of the ladder.
